Introduction

The most successful businesses today are those that can move fast and stay flexible amid many economic and technological changes. As a small business owner, it can be hard to find the time to fit marketing into your busy day-to-day schedule. Even more daunting, it can seem impossible to come up with marketing ideas that produce results and fit your budget.

Yet marketing is one of the most important functions your company can perform. Marketing communications not only help your business find new customers, but also connect with existing ones. Adam Sutton of MarketingSherpa says “Growing your email list has benefits beyond the obvious increase in size. For example, new subscribers are often more active than older ones. They just signed up for your emails and want to click and open them. For this reason (and many others) you should always strive to grow your email list. Doing so will help keep your engagement numbers healthy and ensure your brand is connecting with new prospects.”¹

To be successful, your business must build awareness of your products and services, increase sales, and develop a solid reputation as honest and knowledgeable.

Email marketing is a widely used strategy because it offers the ability to:

- Connect with customers quickly.
- Easily reach a large, diverse audience.
- Keep costs to a minimum.
- Measure your results.

The Direct Marketing Association found that the return on investment for email marketing is still about $41 per dollar spent². More businesses than ever are turning to email marketing as a main vehicle for marketing communication. In 2012, email marketing is projected to drive $651 billion in sales in comparison to $642 for direct marketing.

How to Incorporate emarketing into Your Business

Email marketing is remarkably easy to incorporate into your day-to-day business activities. Any time your company attends an industry event, develops a new product, or reaches a milestone, it is important to share that information with both your current and potential customers. Delivering efficient and effective communications helps keep your business top of mind and enables you to frequently interact and understand what is important to your customers.

Some information you should communicate to contacts includes:

- Telling all your customers about a new product or service.
- Telling customer who own a particular product about a complementary product or service.
- Promoting sales and special offers.
- Sending a customer loyalty award.
- Newsletter, industry news, coming events.
- Ask for feedback.

Ideas for Using emarketing in Your Sales and Marketing

Follow up with new contacts. Email is a great way to follow up with a contact after they visit your business or you call them on the phone.

Make a splash with a new product or service. Let all of your customers know about a great new product by sending them an email.

Celebrate holidays with special promotions. Do you have special sales around holidays like the 4th of July or after Thanksgiving? Are some of your products particularly popular gifts at certain holidays, such as chocolate at Valentine's Day? Send out an email letting customers know about great deals.

Create custom industry-specific promotions for certain types of buyers. Emarketing gives you the ability to easily target groups of customers with specialized messages and promotions, at a very low cost. If you sell business-to-business goods or services, this can be a great way to target individual industries.

Customize promotions by region. Some products are most popular in certain regions and emailing makes it simple to create lots of different promotions, so you can sell snow shovels in Wisconsin and sunscreen in Florida. The faster your customer spots relevant, useful items in your email, the more likely he or she will purchase.

Share achievements. Has your company been the focus of a review by a newspaper, magazine, or online journal? Have you won any recent awards? Let customers know about your accomplishments – it adds to your company's credibility and expertise.

Mark an anniversary. Combine a “thank you for your business” email with an Act! Smart Task to produce an automated loyalty email sent to customer on the one-year anniversary of their first purchase. Why not use this opportunity to offer a small gift or discount with your products?

Send a regular e-newsletter. Share new product information, special offers, and other relevant news with your customer every month, or once per quarter. The repetition will help keep your business on your customers' minds.

Tips for Generating Content

The content of your message should be authentic and concise. The key to success is to offer concrete, eye-catching material that sparks the reader's interest. You can send messages about promotions and products, and value-added content about issues or trends affecting your clients' business.

Remember, your ultimate goal with emailing is to nurture and grow your contact list. Your email should always have a clear message and call to action so that your contacts know what the next step will be. Encouraging your readers to take action provides you with valuable data that you can use to determine who is most interested and can help your sales team focus on the hottest leads. You can even survey your customers to encourage interaction and to get additional information.

Swiftpage emarketing

There's a reason why emarketing is so popular. Emails are easy to create, easy on the budget, and – most importantly – proven to drive sales.

A subscription to Swiftpage emarketing³ gives you a simple way to grow your business by regularly communicating with your contacts. See how easy it is to create and send professional, eye-catching emails that fit the style of your brand. Extend your reach to Facebook®, Twitter®, and LinkedIn® using social sharing features. Then, take a look at easy-to-analyze graphs that help you understand the impact of your messages.

Since Swiftpage emarketing is integrated with Act!, you can take full advantage of your Act! database by sending emails to the contacts, lookups, groups, and companies you already manage with Act!. Building your lists with new details from surveys or web forms is a breeze too; Swiftpage emarketing can help fill in contact details and add new contacts to Act!.

Anyone can send email The key is to do it smartly and efficiently with Swiftpage emarketing inside Act!.

Let's follow along with Bob, Owner of XYZ Corporation as he uses Swiftpage emarketing to grow his business. Bob's company will be unveiling a new, lightweight, waterproof hiking boot – the LiteHiker – later this year. But first, he really needs to sell some of the excess inventory of XYZ's current boot model, the SolidStepper.

Generate Lists Directly From Act!

First, Bob thinks about who his target market is. He wants to use his frequent customer list to offer them an exclusive sale on the old SolidStepper boot. The customer profiles show that these customers buy boots several times per year so he has decided to offer a 40% customer appreciation discount. In Swiftpage emarketing, Bob picks his target list directly from Act!. From here, he can also view contact history and see what communications have been sent to these customers in the past.

Choose Your Content and Template

Bob wants to clear out as much inventory as possible this week. He selects a clean template design that announces the sale. Bob customizes the text so that the headline reads: Customer Appreciation Days: SolidStepper Boots 40% off! He customizes the bottom line to read: Order SolidStepper today and explore the outdoors!

Customer Appreciation Days:

Survey Your Customers

If you want to know what interests your customers, how they think, or what they prefer, you will find emarketing is a great way to quickly field a survey and receive rapid results. To his, Bob also adds a link to a customer survey so he can collect information about his customers' hiking frequency and the types of trails they visit. He hopes this information will be useful when sending out product announcements for the SolidStepper.

Consider Mobile Devices

When Bob selects his template, he knows from experience that his customers are active and a large percentage of them use smartphones. In fact, approximately 35% of U.S. adults use smartphones and 87% of those browse the Internet and read email.⁴ He picks a template that is simple and concise so that his message will be clear to recipients. Think about mobile devices as you send out your email.

Ensure You are Sending Compliant Email Marketing Messages

Nobody wants to send or receive spam. If a user reports Bob's email message as spam, his company could be blacklisted and worse, subject to penalties of up to $16,000 for each violation. With Swiftpage emarketing, Bob reduces his risk. He also runs his email through a free tool before sending it to make sure that spam filters won't junk it.

Deliver Email

Bob has finished editing the template and is ready to send the sale message. In Swiftpage emarketing, Bob chooses the send now option. It is a Monday.

There are several options to choose from when sending an email communication including:

- Send now – send the message right away.
- Schedule send – send the message at a specified time. For example, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 3:00am have statistically shown to have higher open rates than emails sent during business hours. Bob typically uses this option when sending out the company's hiking newsletter.
- Send as – send the message from someone else in your company who has a team account. Bob uses this option when he wants his customers to respond directly to his product design team when they are conducting product tests.

Once Bob sends his email, he receives a report of the total number of addresses and compares it to his list for accuracy. He has named the email blast “SolidStepper Customer Appreciation Sale” so that he can track and report on the results of the campaign.

This email blast information is automatically written into Act! history so he can check to see what messages have been sent to which contacts, who has opened them, who responded to the survey, and more.

Share Your Promotions with Social Media

Bob can spread the message further to Facebook®, Twitter®, and LinkedIn® using social sharing features to get even greater visibility. He can include links to XYZ Corporation’s social media sites in the email message and can post or tweet them directly. Bob’s customers can then share the message with others.

Track Results and Generate Reports

On Tuesday, Bob checks on his “SolidStepper Customer Appreciation Sale” results. He tracks the open rates, click rates, delivered versus sent, bounced, and opt-outs.

Each email is given a score based on the number of times a contact opens and/or clicks on links in the message. Someone who opened the email three times and clicked on four links is given a higher score than another person who only opened the email once. A ranked, qualified Call List is produced for XYZ's sales team – viewable from the contact record in Act! – so they know who to follow up with first.

From the survey responders, Bob's sales team plans to call the hot leads first. Before calling each lead, the salesperson can pull up each customer's history in Act! to see how many times they opened the email, what links they clicked on, how they answered the survey questions, as well as other data about the customer. The salesperson can record any notes from the call into Act!.

Marketing Follow Up

Based on the campaign results, Bob tests additional email messages to customers about the SolidStepper sale. He tries changing subject lines, offers, when he sends the email, and targets a specific segment of the customer base. Bob also tests an entirely new template to see what improves the open and click rates and ultimately the sales!

Additionally, Bob uses data from the survey responses to build his campaign to launch the company's new boot, the LiteHiker.

Conclusion

Email marketing is an effective, inexpensive tool that can benefit your organization's marketing efforts. With a subscription to Swiftpage emarketing, you can easily send professional-looking email communications to your customers and prospects and confidently track the results. Because Swiftpage emarketing integrates with your Act! database, you can automatically keep your contact database up to date with valuable, actionable data for your sales force. You will also learn more about your contacts so you can keep them informed and engaged.

Additionally, options such as Drip Marketing⁵ can help you take email marketing a step further. Make the automation work for you intelligently by designing multi-step campaigns that reach out to the right customers at the right time – so they get timely communications that are relevant to their interests. Swiftpage emarketing not only helps you deliver email communications, but also nurture and grow your prospects and customers so you can turn your leads into loyal customers.

⁵ Drip Marketing is purchased in addition to the Email Marketing service level. Each additional user is an additional cost.

Important Note: Swiftpage emailing requires an additional subscription and is powered by Swiftpage™. Review Act! system requirements at act.com/systreq. You must purchase one license of Act! per user. Scalability varies based on hardware, size, and usage of your database. Visit the Act! Marketplace or contact your add-on product provider to determine compatibility for your add-on products.
